Anderson's Maple Syrup, Inc. has been a family run and organized business for over 80 years. Steve Anderson is the third generation Anderson to carry on the family tradition. Steve's grandfather Paul Anderson started the business in the early 20's as just a little hobby to put some syrup on the table. When Norman Anderson, Steve's Father was old enough to help out he and Paul started to make the business grow.

They started sales with a single, yearly route that took them through parts of Wisconsin and Northern Minnesota. This once a year route was enough to sell all the syrup they made in that season. In the late 50's they decided there was greater opportunity to be had in the maple syrup business than in farming. They took a giant step, sold their dairy cattle and jumped head first into the maple syrup business.

Anderson's Maple Syrup is currently one of the leading brands sold in the Midwest. Anderson's Maple Syrup can be found in grocery stores, bakeries, butcher shops, and specialty shops through out the United States. We can and have supplied all types of businesses with pure maple syrup.

Steve has been the president of Anderson's Maple Syrup, Inc. since 1997, with much guidance from his father Norman, when he graduated from Concordia College in Moorhead, MN. Steve, much like his father and grandfather, plans to expand Anderson's Maple Syrup, Inc. into new markets while maintaining the family's high standard of quality.

In the mid 30's they began by selling their entire year's supply of syrup to Hove's, which would later become Lands and is now part of the Lunds-Byerly's chains. They eventually added other routes that took them through parts of Wisconsin and into Northern Minnesota. In the late 40's they both decided that there was a greater opportunity to be had in the maple syrup business than in farming.
